

Cutaneous Melanoma

Etiology and Therapy

William H. Ward

Jeffrey M. Farma

Editors

Dr. William H. Ward is a fellow in complex general surgical oncology at Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia. An active-duty naval officer, Dr. Ward completed internship in 2008 and aeromedical training in 2009. Designated a Naval Flight Surgeon, he was assigned to Marine Tactical Electronic Warfare Squadron 3 until 2011. He completed general surgery residency at Naval Medical Center Portsmouth in 2015 and served as Ship's Surgeon, USS

George H.W. Bush, until 2016. Dr. Ward is Assistant Professor of Surgery, F. Edward Hebert School of Medicine, Uniformed Services University and an associate fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Jeffrey M. Farma completed general surgery residency at Temple University, surgical oncology research fellowship at National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Maryland, and clinical surgical oncology fellowship at Moffitt Cancer Center, Tampa, Florida. He joined the Department of Surgical Oncology, Fox Chase Cancer Center in 2009 and is an Associate Professor of Surgical Oncology. Dr. Farma serves as Program Director, Complex General Surgical Oncology Fellowship and Surgical Director, Melanoma and Skin Cancer Program. He was awarded the 2016 Melanoma Research Foundation Humanitarian Award, is a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, Association of Academic Surgeons and Society of University Surgeons.

